Miss Rose Peterson, Secretary Parkdale Tennis Club, Chicago, from experience advises all young girls who have pains and sickness peculiar to their sex, to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

How many beautiful young girls develop into worn, listless and hopeless women, simply because sufficient attention has not been paid to their physical development. No woman is exempt from physical weakness and periodic pain, and young girls just budding into womanhood should be carefully guided physically as well as morally. Another woman,

Miss Hannah E. Mershon, Collingswood, N. J., says:

"I thought I would write and tell you that, by following your kind advice, I feel like a new person. I was always thin and delicate, and so weak that I could hardly do anything. Menstruation was irregular.

"I tried a bottle of your Vegetable Compound and began to feel better right away. I continued its use, and am now well and strong, and menstruate regularly. I cannot say enough for what your medicine did for me. $5.00 for a bottle of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will cure any woman in the land who suffers from womb troubles, inflammation of the ovaries, and kidney troubles.

Written for the Advertiser. Old Bachelors.

Dear Advertiser readers,
I'll write a humorous rhyme
Of Old Bachelors in this town.
Now isn't the subject fine?

We have no records that do tell,
In this world which has been so long,
From whence this class of mortals sprang,
Nor what their pedigree.

But reason comes up to our aid,
And gives us this little clue:
That they, like little Topsy,
Were not made, but simply grew.

Old Bachelors are not plentiful,
In fact the crop is small;
The earth might move on the same
If there were none at all.

In construction, they are similar
To other being, man,
But they are not in particular,
I hardly think I can.

They are quite ornamental,
Look splendid moving around,
But yet are of no earthly use,
That ever has been found.

A sort of unaccountable,
Which we meet now and then;
And they are very unapproachable,
And think they're the "upper ten."

Old Bachelors are very still,
Quite modest and dignified,
And when you meet one on the street,
They are not at all excited.

They generally reside alone
In some secluded spot,
And company will seldom have,
When they could use a lot.

Now sisters young and sisters old,
To you just let me say
If you would have you note,
"I will be labor thrown away."

There is no device upon earth
By which they can be caught;
Unless estate all our arts,
Our efforts all for naught.

For what Old Bachelors were made
We have never been able to find,
And so we'll leave the problem
As one we cannot solve.

Litchfield, Maine. FRANCES L. HIGGINS.

The Limit.

She can steer a boat, she can make a coat,
And you ought to see her swim and float;
She can write and sew and knit and cook,
And if necessary can raise a shoe.

She's content to do a stupid "blat,"
And she'll simply gloat over the poems "wrote";
Of ancient castles and antique notes,
She can write and read and have you note.

Can tell the difference 'twixt corn and oat,
Can tell the difference 'twixt corn and oat,
For every line at antique notes,
But the simple note of a petticoat.

Limits her sphere. CORA M. W. GREENLEAF.

Then, and Now.

"Mong clover blooms I use to play,
And frolic on the new-mown hay;
Then life for me had not a trow,
With heart as light as daisy down.

And free from every thought of care,
Sweet happiness seemed everywhere.
The wild birds sang and I was glad,
And I was just as glad and free.

As any bird upon the wing,
And each breeze each flower and spring,
I roamed the fields for fragrant flowers,
And passed in joy my childhood hours.

Like months the later years appear!
How everything has changed since then!
My playmates have grown into men,
And women, some with locks of gray,

And I am changed as much as they!
No more I roam among the flowers,
And pass in pleasure my days;
But toiling on, and growing old,

And no rest for me until I stand
Among those of the better land.

winning far and near, like silver snakes curiously tangled, yet constantly struggling on among high rolling hills and fording mountains. Wild rivers between lofty peaks and craggy ridges, tumbling among cloud-shadows, seem like chaotic billows, tumbled and hardened by some gigantic power into bounds that outpost the faded land where fairy beauties dwell by the spring of endless youth in the full enjoyment of unalloyed happiness.

Behold with shouts and clattering of inbound hoofs, they come—waving scarfs and hats and loud exclamations of wonder mingle from opposite parties
—and forests, mountains, plains, rivers, valleys, villages, harvest-fields and farmhouses, all mingle in one overwhelming prospect to astonish all.

Stand on tip-top, on the skeleton scaffold erected to outdo nature in her perfection, and see all the wide field of observation gradually shut out from view by the shadows of dark clouds, that walk like heartless giants over all the haunts of men, and mark the storm gathering in the valley. On it comes—the seeming hazy, hazy, hazy, hazy, the wings of the swift wind from the dark caverns where the hurricane sleeps, blackness and thick clouds, armed with thunder and streaked with living fire, that wildly leap from rock to rock, hang like a pall around "tip-top." Then the tongues of the electric light sing—
"Where desolation sets the picture grandeur, the spirit of annihilation is abroad."

To such wild music I have listened till my thoughts assumed the shape of terror and a dread like the fears of death crept like a monster through my blood. I would that I had an adequate language to display in words the picture presented to my mind at the time when the unbroken blast comes sweeping up the jagged rocks—with a voice strong and stunning as the eternal rush of a mighty water-fall, and unbroken as the earrings thunder, pealing incessantly for days even and could I paint thick clouds
all the while wildly flying by
covering scathed rocks, as well as feeling
mortality that chances to be among
tip clouds with freezing "tear-drops,"
then would I shriek "enore" to the
rushed terrors.

The thrill, the misting of the flag line, mingled with a curious combination of notes that from every angle of the rough-built walls of the tip-top house, chime in with this wild mountain tune music, in strains most peculiarly their own; and every rock that crowns "the summit," though raggedly shaped by the Altimpy hand—which long ago destroyed the original order—has a sound that tortured from its insensibility by the moving Master of nature, all combine to form a mighty outpouring of double bass thundering, so loud and resounding that the very mountains tremble with fear and could I paint thick clouds
all the while wildly flying by
covering scathed rocks, as well as feeling
mortality that chances to be among
tip clouds with freezing "tear-drops,"
then would I shriek "enore" to the
rushed terrors.

WOODSTOCK.

Oldest Citizen.

Crosby Curtis is now in his ninety-fourth year, having been born January 29, 1811, and is Woodstock's oldest native born citizen. He is the son of Morton and Dorcas Young Curtis. His grandfather, Noah Curtis, was born in Plymouth, Mass., and married Deborah Luce of Cape Cod. He moved to Hebron then Norway and in 1804 purchased lot number ten in Woodstock. This lot has been cultivated by his descendants for three generations.

Morton Curtis, Crosby's father, came from Norway in 1801 and the next year purchased lot number fifteen of Tilden Bartlett. A clearing was first made on this lot in 1799 by Luke Owens, the Irishman, who was a deserter from an English man-of-war.

He was the first settler to locate in the South part and the second to make any opening in the town. On this lot Morton Curtis always lived and his son Crosby is living there to day. This is the oldest farm in town with the exception of the two lots on which a clearing was begun by the Bryant brothers in 1797, known as the "Common." Crosby Curtis married Mary Paine, daughter of Davis Paine. She passed away a few months ago.

Mr. Curtis has always held the friendship of his neighbors and townsmen.
He has been a kind, honest, citizen.
He is nearly the last left of the town's pioneers whose years of manhood meant rugged hardships in the struggle to clear away for homes and farms among its huge forests and rocky hillsides.

Mrs. Sarah Warren Dana,

Mrs. Sarah Warren Dana, a former resident of Fryeburg, died in Providence, R. I., on Thursday morning, Oct. 13, aged 89 years and six months.

She was the daughter of Isaiah and Ann (Walker) Warren, and was born in Fryeburg, March 21, 1835. Here she spent her early years and received her education. She was talented in many ways, especially in music, and on leaving school chose this as her life work.
She studied vocal and instrumental music in Portland and Worcester, Mass., and later in Pennsylvania, where she became a very successful teacher. She possessed a soprano voice of remarkable sweetness that always made her singing a delight to all.

Early in life Mrs. Dana became a member of the Presbyterian church, and as long as her health permitted, she was active in church and Sunday school work. She was a leading member of church choirs for many years in Maine and Pennsylvania, and was every ready to assist with her voice in every good cause.

During the dark days of the Civil war,
she was married to Milton Dana, a lawyer of Wilkesbarre, Penn., who had recently returned from a long residence in the South. He soon entered the Union army and during the latter part of the war he was stationed in the office of Elmira and New York, and they resided in that state for some years. They then returned to Wilkesbarre from whence they passed the remainder of their lives.
Mr. Dana died several years ago in New Hampshire.

Mrs. Dana leaves no children, but she gave a mother's tender love and care to Percy Walker Dana of Portland, Oregon,
the youngest son of a deceased sister.
She also leaves one brother, Dr. Orin Warren, of Wilkesbarre, Mass., and two sisters, Mrs. Jane W. Dana of Tunhannock, Penn., and Mrs. Joel E. Morrill of Conway Center, N. H.

The funeral services were held at the Warren homestead, Fryeburg, on Saturday morning, Oct. 15, at 10 o'clock, and were conducted by her nephew, Rev.
Stephen Tracy Livingston, recently an-nointed with Hartford Theological Seminary. They consisted of passages from the Scriptures, a prayer and the reading of a favorite hymn, More Love to Thee,
O Christ, written by Mrs. Elizabeth Payson Prentiss.

The pall bearers were three nephews,
George O. Warren, Charles C. Warren
and Edward E. Hastings, and a cousin, Seth A. Page, all of Fryeburg.

There were beautiful floral tributes from her friends. The burial was in the family lot in Pine Grove Cemetery.

Victor Binford of Mexico, charged with assault and intent to kill Arthur Varney, is held for trial for the February term of court and placed under $1000

After obtaining his education in the public schools of that city, he opened up a photograph business and conducted it with much success for many years. He was very prominent in Masonic circles, having held many offices in the Masonic bodies of his city. He also took a deep interest in historical matters, both in his adopted and his native town.

Almost Too Good To Be True.
A rumor is floating about that a dynamo may shortly be built in connection with the mill of E. F. Needless hunters are being heard from hereabout. Winslow Walker of Stow just over the line from North Fryeburg is a loser by having an ox shot by mistake for a deer, Saturday. Stray bullets make any outdoor pursuits unsafe. A few days ago while James and Walter Hardy were in their field digging potatoes a bullet sped by them near enough to be heard and seen. While another bullet from a rifle in the hands of a boy struck a tree under which at the time Harold McKean and another young man were standing.

Many about here have sold their apples at $1 a barrel and others are holding them and say they will feed them to stock rather than let them go at that price, and we learn that one man has let his apples freeze on the trees having decided they were not worth picking.

It may be of interest to the readers who are hunters to learn that a boy 14 years old, Johnnie Stearns of Fryeburg, shot a deer, one a buck weighing 200 pounds, the other a doe weighing when dressed 81 pounds. The young hunter says he will not take less than $5 for the antlers that were taken from the buck.

NORWAY AND VICINITY.

The Alchemist.
There was but a small audience Saturday night at the performance of "The Alchemist" by Louis J. Russell, but certainly if people could have realized the treat in store for them the house would have been packed. The play is a very powerful one, and while in some respects might be criticised as not teaching the best of lessons, yet in the main it is very powerful with many powerful situations and climaxes. Mr. Russell as Cyrus Bleanam, the old potter, who through trials and disappointments and poverty seeks to make the alchemist and discovers it at last, is a fine artist. His work was the best unquestionably of any actor who has appeared in this Opera House, pathetic, anger, dignity and determination all being finely wrought out. His supporting is excellent. There were no stinks and the performance went like clockwork.

A Norway Number.

The October number of the Board of Trade Journal of Portland is a Norway number and is one of the best special numbers the Journal has issued. For several weeks W. H. Howard, representative of the Journal, was in Norway collecting information and pictures, and soliciting patronage of subscribers and advertisers to this special number, and the success attending his mission is indicative of the interest all our business men take in whatever makes for progress in the town.

The edition is a finely printed number with excellent half tone illustrations. Articles are by H. L. Plummer of the Advertiser on Norway of the Present, by George L. Curtis, secretary, on Norway Board of Trade, by Harry A. Packard on Norway as a Summer Resort and Norway Before the Fire, by M. L. Kimball, esq., on Secret Fraternities of Norway, and write-ups of Norway's Industries and mercantile and other views of our village, several of the lake, several residences, portraits of H. J. Bangs, A. J. Stearns, G. L. Curtis, president, vice president and secretary respectively of Norway Board of Trade, and pictures of A. S. Kimball and M. L. Kimball. A comprehensive account of the present of the meeting of the State Board in Lewiston, Sept. 22.

Norway's Early History.

A few sketches taken from Norway's history:—

Early Settlers Buy the Land.

In 1789, Capt. Henry Rust, the proprietor of Rustfield, commenced building a grist and saw-mill on the site where the Cummings saw-mill is at the upper part of the village. The grist mill was completed in October. Samuel Ames ground the first grist and continued to be the miller for forty years or more. Thomas Cowen, who came from Paris, tended the saw mill.

While Capt. Rust was building the mills he employed the new settlers on his plantation to work for him, allowing them half a dollar per day towards their land, that he sold to them for half a dollar per acre, thus every day's work paid for an acre of land.

The First Schoolhouse.

In 1794 the first schoolhouse was built on Amos Hobbs' land on the road leading from the Center by William Parsons'. Job Eastman taught the first school in that house, and Abigail Symonds the first woman's school.

The First Post Office.

In 1800 the first post office was established and William Reed appointed postmaster. He held the office about forty years. He kept a store of goods and had a large trade; and was also extensively engaged in farming.

Jacob Howe was the first mail carrier, and rode on horseback with the mail bag, and a large pair of saddle-bags in which he carried a few newspapers. He came from Portland; through Gray, New Gloucester, Poland, Hebron to Norway, then to Waterford, Bridgton, Raymond, Standish, Gorham to Portland again once a week. The time of his arrival at the several post offices along his route depended on circumstances, the state of the weather and the condition of the road.

A Shocking Accident.

In May, 1807, Joel Stevens, Jr., and William Stevens, sons of Joel Stevens, and Francis Butcher, a hired man, went to a brook between Mud and Sand ponds near the fishing place, against which they were in the habit of building fires, and there had been built there a kind of a camp for shelter when not fishing.

After fishing a while they laid down in the camp to rest, and suddenly the rock split open and a large portion of it fell on the camp crushing it down upon them. William Stevens was so injured that he was carried to his home, where he lived about three days, suffering the most excruciating pain till his death. Joel Stevens was so confined down by parts of the camp that he could not get out till Butcher, who was not confined, took their ax and chopped off the poles and thus liberated him.

William's funeral sermon was preached by Noah Cressey, who found his text in Ecclesiastes 12, "For man also knoweth not his time; as the fishes that are taken in an evil net, and as the birds that are caught in the snare, so are the sons of men snared in an evil time, when it falleth suddenly upon them."

A Sudden Death.

In the winter of 1808 a very sudden death occurred in the northwest school district. At noon time the boys were playing goal. Francis Major, a boy about fourteen years old, started to go around a ball field. A boy on the other side, pursued him. The snow crust bore them well, but Francis slipped through very suddenly and pitched forward. He sprang to his feet and instantly fell on the snow a corpse. It was supposed by the doctor that the sudden jerk as he fell broke his neck.

Rambles.

Early October.
O suns and skies and clouds of June, And flowers of June together, Ye cannot equal for one hour October's bright blue weather.

Writes Helen Hunt Jackson, and truly Nature has attained her most perfect loveliness. The autumn woods are crowned in glory.

Bustly night after night Jack Frost has worked among the trees changing with his wonderful touch the leafy green to beautiful red and gold, till "huge bouquets" they mingle with the never changing evergreens.

Partridge and deer seek refuge from the sportsman's rifle and echoes awake to the baying hound for this is the month to the hunter.

Birds are on the wing once more and we catch farwile glimpses of many little songsters almost unseen since June. Now with their nestlings fully fledged they are leaving us for a land that is always summer. Sadly we watch them go and when our last robin is flown winter seems near at hand. With the birds goes the real life of the woods but not for long, for in the first sunny days of March we shall hear again the call of robin and bluebird.

Among our winter birds will remain the little chickadees.
They mind not the days of frost and cold, But over the snowy leas Cheerily call their merry notes:
"Whitish a deer, whitish a deer."

We come from fields blue with gentians—both closed and fringed—seeking in the wood the year's last gift, the witch hazel. Just above our head we find them, small, pale yellow blossoms, with such a strange, sweet fragrance.

To our gentian bouquet we add the hazel and slowly retrace our steps. Reluctantly we leave the fairy woodland, for too well we know that when next we come all this bright beauty will be gone, drowned in the chilling November rains.

Then a few warm days of Indian summer and the North King rules at will. From dark clouds the snowflakes fall, and some winter morning the late rising sunbeams will shine upon a new world, beautiful, radiant, in her robes of crystal white.

Buck Fever.

An Old Hunter Tells Just What it is Like.

Hundreds of enthusiastic men and women plunge boldly along well defined trails in the Maine forests each autumn, seeking the stately buck. The hunting of deer either from a canoe or upon the forest trail is one of the rarest experiences in human existence. The most mysterious influence with which the hunter has to contend is the "buck fever."

"Just wait till you get 'buck fever,'" says an old hunter. "I'll tell you that when a man or woman gets that fever, they are likely to do anything. I've known 'em to shoot in the air, shoot through the bottom of the boat and sink her or tumble so that they could not shoot at all."

"One night I was up a tree with a guide waiting for a deer to come out and after we'd waited night an hour we saw the bushes on the edge of the woods above us begin to move. The moon was shining and we could see a fine deer coming down to the water. Right at the edge of the wood he stopped and sniffed. He waited a minute and then began to nibble the bark of a tree."

"That guide with me shook as if he had the ague. He trembled so that he could hardly hold on to the tree and we shot that deer all on account of that guide getting 'buck fever.' He had been hunting deer for years, but he said he always felt the same way when he saw a deer come near as he could not see well enough to aim a gun."

"I had the buck fever once," says a woman hunter who visits the north woods regularly each autumn. "The guides had placed me on a runaway and I waited to hear something moving through the woods toward me. At first way off in the distance I heard a dry twig crack. I had been expecting the sound for a long time, but when I heard it my heart began to beat very fast. The deer may not have been three minutes from the time I first heard it in getting into full view, but it seemed an hour to me. I began to think I wouldn't see him, when there suddenly appeared a beautiful buck only a few rods away. He looked straight at me and I could not take my eyes off him. I was simply spell-bound. My arms were like lead. I struggled inward to burst some mysterious bonds. The gun lay in my lap ready for use. I appreciated all these things, but was helpless."

"At last, after a great effort I lifted my arms. But they came with a violent jerk and frightened the deer away. That was some years ago, and although it took several seasons to overcome the sensation, I am now able to shoot like a man, once I get a bead on the deer." [Livermore Falls Advertiser.]

The entertainment given by Ida Jenness Moulton of Beverly, Mass., in the Grange hall, Wednesday evening, the 12th was very fine.

The New England Magazine for October presents an unusually interesting and attractive array of contents. Among other illustrated articles of note are a graphic description of "Child Life in the Philippines," by Minna Irving, and a fine account of that splendid charity, "The Boston Floating Hospital," by Amy Woods.

Old fellow, it's the same old story. I'm in need of a little financial succor.

You'll have to hunt further. I am not the little financial sucker I used to be.

Mrs. Carlton's Wonderful Story.

Many a Woman's Thrilling Experience Published in Norway.

There are scores of families in Norway and near by towns who will testify with interest to the wonderful experience of Mrs. A. L. Carlton, one of the best known women in Rockland, Me. Mrs. Carlton's Wonderful Story.

Maine Woman's Thrilling Experience
 Mrs. Carlton's story is a most interesting one. There are scores of families in Norway, Me., who will read with interest the wonderful experience of Mrs. A. L. Carlton, one of the best known women in Rockland, Me. Her husband, who treated her, and by C. H. Horne, the druggist, who sold her medicine, told her of her experience. Mrs. Carlton says: "I suffered with stomach trouble for eight years, growing worse all the time. Three of the best doctors in Maine diagnosed my case as cancer of the stomach and declared I could not live two months. Utterly discouraged by their treatment, I began using Mi-o-na and commenced to gain weight. At this time, I was reduced to almost skin and bones, as I had lost nearly 100 pounds during my sickness, but when I began to take Mi-o-na, my flesh was built up and I gained 22½ lbs. in the first month. When I discharged my physicians, I was suffering great pain and distress, and vomiting from two to six times a day, but after the first week's use of Mi-o-na, the pain ceased and the vomiting stopped entirely. I have taken only six packages of these wonderful tablets, but my health is about restored and I firmly believe that Mi-o-na saved my life."

Yoges Drug Store are local agents for Mi-o-na, which sells for 50 cents a box, and offer it under personal guarantee that it does not cure the worst form of stomach trouble and resulting disorders, the money will be refunded.

 The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the cause of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution. It is an invigorating and healthy nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. There is a school in Chicago where study is made so attractive that formal discipline is almost entirely absent. This school is described by H. Foster in an article of more than usual interest in the November number of the Booklovers Magazine. It is known as the Chicago School of Education, which regards pedagogy as subject matter not of instruction but of investigation.

The November number of Scribner's Magazine contains the second of Thomas F. Millard's illuminative articles upon the war in the east. In this he deals with the organization and personnel of the Russian Army, with which he has been, and accounts for the lack of efficiency and general unpreparedness of Russia to meet the conditions as they have developed. His statements regarding the number of troops in the field and the Trans-Siberian Railroad will surprise many.

Any worn out range burns at least three cents more in fuel every day than a new Glenwood. That's putting it small. 3 times 365 is $10.95. You see it doesn't take long to waste the cost of a new Glenwood and the expense isn't all, the chances are the old range is the "worry kind."
